Dig The P.O.S. Pop-punk iconoclast P.O.S. has a new album called We Don't Even Live Here, out today. It's his best album yet, featuring 13 tracks that at times veer into rap, and sometimes into P.O.S. Iggy Pop (Mumford & Sons) named it one of his favorite albums of 2013. The self-titled tune came out first, and is pretty good but not excellent, but the new stuff is just outstanding, starting with the opening track, "Stanley." It's sort of like a bedroom run-up to "Too Much." There's only one lyric in the whole song that makes any sense. "Tell him I'm an idiot / You told him that already" Next up is "Mighty," featuring Tyler, the Creator. It's not P.O.S. really -- it's an album song. "I'm here, you know me / Got my name on your drawing" -- well, that's just a long-ish intro, and Tyler comes in with the best verse, complete with puns, the best showing of his singing skills, and just a whole lot of fun. The rest of the album is amazing. All of them have a similar tempo, and the tracks alternate between a half-rap, half-singing style and a pop punk sound, with just enough funk to make them sound fresh. The tone changes are subtle, and you might not notice that the music is moving in different directions, but they're all great songs that feel like they're coming from the same person. P.O.S. hates being in a rush, and in this album, there's hardly anything that sounds forced. Most of the

Cosmos - Escape From Freedom Crack + Keygen Full Version PC/Windows

Gameplay Virtueror, was the first game I made on my own. It's a quirky turn-based tactical game. It revolves around a colony on the brink of disaster. Litteraly. Gameplay Virtueror uses a combination of unique mechanics that I think makes it something quite different. The 4 player mode is a strategic experience, and the 2 player mode makes it easy to get started with, and yet still quite fun. Here's what's different about my game: - I made a beautiful game with over 100 hours of playtime. - Gameplay Virtueror can be played and won online or offline. - Gameplay Virtueror has a set of set of 4 different maps (more will come) - The maps are designed with different tactical challenges, and include a set of 5 different units to conquer. - Gameplay Virtueror has a day/night cycle, where the gameplay changes depending on time of day. - If you have an 8 bit CPU, you can play Gameplay Virtueror at a resolution of 640x480 There's more, but that's enough for today :) Screenshots: Screenshot 1: Screenshot 2: Screenshot 3: Screenshot 4: Screenshot 5: Screenshot 6: This is the Steam Greenlight page. I just made it in case you missed it or want to join the discord server. Gameplay Virtueror is currently under development. We are trying to release a playable game, but it's far from it. This is just a Alpha 1 with a bunch of new gameplay and fixes. Join our Discord server to get access to the first alpha builds and to influence the development with ideas and feedback. What's new in Cosmos - Escape From Freedom:

survival offers a nice change of pace, even though Kirk says you can play it with "one quibble." On the surface, it feels a lot like Rust, but with a world, a story, an economy, and of course, player and game interaction. SHADOW DELVING: The cat-related conceit is nifty, and several genres inflect surprisingly well into another. Thief is roughly there, Castlevania is there in the labyrinth, even Dark Souls is there in the fire — and not in the way you expect. RESIDENT EVIL 5: I know, I know, already googled it. But it is worth it for how closely it captures the same shambling malaise, sweet AI-who-should-be-extinct-maybe-but-doesn't-artificial-intelligence, and anti-climactic wrap-up that RE4 and 5 delivered. No, that's not an answer. VAZHINAVOI GUESTS: You want a nice, reasonable story? You want carefully-crafted characters? You want a manageable size and number of rooms? You want to see a cutscene unfolding? You want to watch the backdrop transform, the avatar transform, the player transform? You want to see house in something besides this list? And most certainly you want to see it every goddamn time? PCZ REVEAL: Settling a fight seems simpler than lucking into a card. It isn't luck, but it certainly doesn't seem to happen by pure skill. There's a bit of luck involved, but just enough that skill doesn't make a difference all the time. I wish there was more luck. But this is perhaps the BEST player vs. player game in more than a year. I went to a San Diego panel last week on the game, and I couldn't find a single thing wrong with it. I have problems with the deck-building aspect in many of these games, but here everything worked really well for me. I ultimately got 6 games before I went into BO3. DOPPLER: It's a fun and pleasant collection of cheese- and slime-themed music. There are enough tracks on here for you to stumble across your favorite instead of shoving yourself into the depths for a beautiful ritual of discovery. Patient Eleven: The game is based on the history of a long series of experiments on human subjects, but it feels more like the movie it
