What is Photoshop? Photoshop is a raster graphics software package developed by Adobe Systems. Photoshop is a raster graphics editor. How to use Photoshop To create a new document, choose File > New. You will then be brought to the new document window, which has two rows of controls: a grid of toolbar buttons along the top and an image canvas in the lower portion. To resize an image, select the image and then choose Image > Image Size. In the Image Size dialog box, you can set the width, height, and resolution of the image. You can also crop or change the image by selecting Crop and then choosing an area of the image to crop. (The Crop area can be selected on top or bottom, left or right.) In addition to image-related editing, Photoshop also has many tools that allow you to create new shapes and objects. When creating shapes, hold down the SHIFT key to add the shape to a new layer. Layers act like the individual compartments in an image where you can place objects. To create a new layer, from the Layers palette, click on the NEW LAYER icon. Or from the Layers panel, click on LAYER > NEW LAYER. To name a layer, choose LAYER > LABEL LAYER or choose the name in the LAYER LABELER panel. You can then place and move objects on each layer. To move an object from one layer to another, double-click on the object, or use the move tool. You can also click on a small white "+" sign to add a layer to the layer stack. Some of the tools in Photoshop allow you to do things not possible in raster programs, such as create an image from vector data. The LAYER LABELER panel allows you to assign text or other objects to a layer. Click the + sign, choose TEXT from the ADD menu, and type a name for your layer. The Image > Image Size command allows you to resize the image (as well as the canvas) while maintaining image quality. To resize the image, choose Image > Image Size and then use the sliders to control size and resolution. The sliders are read in pixels. You can also crop the image to a specific size, or resize the canvas by dragging the edge of the canvas.

Speaking of, is your wife fat, fat like a Hummer? Is your friend overweight? Then maybe they shouldn't eat the fucking buffet. And finally, kids are the most annoying fucking thing in the entire world. When they were little, they'd cry all the time, and no matter how hard you tried to get out of there, they'd actually follow you to the car, they didn't want to leave. And they would throw their food and desserts, which was also annoying. You would make spaghetti and meat
