Q: SharePoint 2010: FindItem returns empty collection I've been trying to troubleshoot this all day and can't find a solution anywhere. I have this code that should, at its base, return all items in a list:
SPListItemCollection items = SPList1.Items; foreach (SPListItem item in items) { //do stuff with the item here } The problem is, when I breakpoint in that line, I can see that SPListItemCollection items contains null items, even if there are items in the List. Any ideas what I'm doing wrong? (BTW, the list does have the listfield with all the relevant columns) A: You're calling SPListItemCollection.Items without a filter. It will return a collection of all items in the list. You probably want the Items collection with a filter: SPListItemCollection items = SPList1.Items.Cast() .Where(i => i["Prop1"] == "foo"); 1,000. They were $1,000,000. At that time, part of the same scheme to defraud was in effect. 2. "We had a persistent habit of using the mails." "I got the habit, and when I see a car pull into the parking lot, and he rings the bell, I call one of the office girls, and then I pay. I put the envelope in my pocket; I pay by mail; I close the till up, and mail it back to Atlanta." 3. "You started the habit of using the mails; *
